Travelling Models offers a theoretical concept for comparative research on conflict resolution in Africa in processes of globalization: how is change in one place related to developments in other places? Why are certain issues that are important in one place taken up in other places, while others are not? The authors examine how the travel of models enact changes, particularly in African conflict situations, most often in unexpected ways. They look at what happens when a model has been put into practice at a conflict site, and they pay attention to the forms of social (re-)ordering resulting from this process. The authors look, among others, at conflict managing models of power- and revenue sharing, mediation, freedom of expression, disaster management, community involvement and workshopping.

Andrea Behrends
Dr. phil., is Principal Investigator of a cooperative research project on “Oil and Social Change in Niger and Chad”. Her publications focus on political anthropology and Africa.

Sung-Joon Park
is Lecturer at the University of Leipzig. He has published on mass HIV treatment in Uganda.

Richard Rottenburg holds a Chair in Anthropology at the University of Halle, Germany. His research focuses on the anthropology of law, organisation, science and technology (LOST).

“In spite of numerous pleas for a "symmetrical approach" in field studies, research on Africa has suffered from seemingly unavoidable exoticism, framed into the space and time of “the Other”. Travelling Models breaks out of this framework decisively, applying an analytical frame well-known from organization studies to conclude conflict management in African countries. The results are an important contribution to globalization studies, revealing both the unyielding traits of global models and the intricate nuances of local translations; unexpected similarities and unanticipated differences. A collection of studies that is a source of new knowledge, as well as a template for a new kind of global studies.”

Barbara Czarniawska, University of Gothenburg, Sweden

ISSN 1574-6925
brill.com/aegis